BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

The Beal family apparently originated in Nottingham in the County of Chester in England, where John Beal wrote his will in 1726. In 1810 Curtis Beal appears in a deed in Highland County, Ohio; in 1834 he laid out a village called Springboro in Randolph County, Indiana (centering on Winchester, on the east border of the state). With his wife Hannah, Curtis Beals appears on Randolph County deeds from 1834 to 1837 dealing with Springboro, and in notes written on a printed 1845 letter from the London Society of Friends. The only Spring Borough in the Postal History of Indiana was in White County in the 1850s.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection, including eleven items, consists of a will, several deeds, and a note. It is arranged chronologically. The earliest item is a Xerox copy of the 1726 will of John Beal of Nottingham, naming several of his children. Of the remaining items, most concern Curtis Beals of Randolph County, and date from 1810 to 1837. An 1855 deed concerns T. A. Wilkins and D. W. Brown, and a lot in the town of Farmland.
