HISTORICAL SKETCH

S.A. Fletcher & Company Bank was established in 1839 by Stoughton A. Fletcher, Sr. Known as Fletcher's Bank, it merged with American National Bank in 1910. It then became known as Fletcher American National Bank, with Stoughton Fletcher II, grandson of the founder, as president. The building was located at the southeast corner of Pennsylvania and Market Streets in Indianapolis.

In 1933, Fletcher American National Bank of Indianapolis went bankrupt. A plan was made to liquidate the bank. The assets were reorganized into a new bank, American National Bank at Indianapolis. Primary Liquidating Trustees included Otto J. Feucht, John P. Collett, and William N. Fleming, Jr. The trustees also advertised offering portions of the property for sale to the highest cash bidders. All assets were not liquidated until the 1950s.
