HISTORICAL/BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

The Indianapolis, Indiana Department of Parks and Recreation oversees the park facilities and activities in Marion County. In response to the "City Beautiful" movement popularized by the 1893 World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago, Indianapolis initiated improvements to the city parks at the beginning of the 20th century. The idea of a boulevard following Fall Creek from downtown to the State Fairgrounds began around 1901. By 1906 Fall Creek Boulevard was completed between Capitol and Central Avenue and a section of Pleasant Run Boulevard between Raymond and Beecher streets.

The original park-boulevard plan was the work of George Edward Kessler, a landscape architect from Kansas City. He was hired in 1905 by the park board to develop a system of parks connected by boulevards along the city's waterways. Kessler's design's protected and enhanced the natural landscape along the parkways. Fall Creek Parkway, the Garfield Park sunken gardens, and Riverside Park were all part of his master plan for the city.

Fall Creek is a major tributary of the White River in Marion County. It begins in the northeast corner of the county and flows southwest for almost twenty miles to the White River. The confluence with the river was once a large wetland area at Washington Street, but was moved to 10th Street following the 1913 flood to alleviate poor drainage.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The collection, donated by the Indianapolis Historic Preservation Commission, is comprised of photographs taken in the early years of the 20th century of the unimproved Fall Creek Parkway, and other city areas under the jurisdiction of the Indianapolis Department of Parks and Recreation.

The collection contains photographs of land along unimproved Fall Creek Parkway, construction of the parkway, bridge photographs, and other city areas under the jurisdiction of the Indianapolis Department of Parks and Recreation.

Photographs are described in the collection guide with descriptions taken from the verso of each photograph, with photograph numbers and dates. The majority of the photographs are 8" x 10" black and white prints. Included in the collection are a number of photocopies of the prints and some paper negatives.

Series I: Indianapolis Parkways and Boulevards is arranged with the beginning of construction of the Parkway at the mouth of Fall Creek and the White River, then moves upstream. Folders are titled Fall Creek Parkway at Northwestern Avenue, Indiana & Senate Avenues, Capitol Avenue, Illinois & Meridian Streets, Central & College Avenues, 30th Street, Fairgrounds, and Monon Railroad. Next are lands under the jurisdiction of the Indianapolis Department of Parks: Pleasant Run Parkway and White Rive Parkway, including a few photographs of Riverside Park.

Series II: Various City Park Photographs is arranged by subject from construction, park events, horticulture and scenic views.

Series II: Photocopies of Photographs and Proofs is made up of photocopied photographs with descriptive notes and proofs of the 1914 City of Indianapolis Annual Report.

Photographs were taken by several different local photographers: Charles F. Bretzman, W. Frank Jones, George W. King, and Kirkpatrick Photo.
