SCOPE AND COTENT NOTE

This collection consists of fifteen transcripts of interviews that were completed as part of a project entitled "Remembering Indiana in the Twentieth Century." The project was funded in part by an Indiana Historical Society Clio Grant awarded to Indiana University. John E. Bodnar (b. 1944) of IU's Oral History Research Center served as Project Director.

A manuscript, comprised of information from over thirty interviews, will be produced. The manuscript will be organized into six chapters representing six geographical locations throughout Indiana. Those locations are Anderson, Evansville, Indianapolis, Paoli, South Bend, and Whiting.

The interviews in this collection were conducted between 11 May 1995 and 28 November 1996. Six of the interviews relate to Indianapolis (Brookins, Edelen, Murphy, Taylor, and Wood); one to Tell City (Labhart); and the others relate to Evansville. All of the interviews discuss the individuals' family and personal histories, and the city or area where they lived. Each contains an index. Discussions of labor unions are found in many of the interviews. Subjects that are prevalent in the interviews of the Indianapolis residents include African-Americans in the city, the Flanner House Home Building Project (See also: M 513, Flanner House Records; and card catalog under: Flanner House), and Crispus Attucks High School (See also: M 488, Spears Family Papers; and M 522, Russell Lane Papers).

The interviews are arranged in chronological order.
