Founded: 1908

In 1908, a small group of investors in Seymour, Ind., founded the New Building and Loan Association. The object of the association “shall be to provide its members a safe and profitable investment of their funds and to loan them money on easy terms to enable them to purchase homes or to make other investments.” The bank was founded on Sept. 15, 1908, and the first business day was Oct. 5, 1908. Dues were 25 cents per week, and loans were six percent. The original capital in the company was $300,000.

Through the years, the bank grew through branching or mergers. The first branch was opened in downtown Columbus in 1951.

Throughout its lifetime, the bank has been innovative in the products and services it offers to residents of its communities. In many instances, we were the first financial institution to offer a new service or innovative technology. Today, we continue to search out ways to make life easier for our customers through outstanding service, products and ideas.

The bank has changed its name several times over the years from New Building and Loan Association to Home Savings and Loan Association to Home Federal Savings and Loan to Home Federal Savings Bank to Indiana Bank and Trust Company. The current name, adopted on March 1, 2008, marks a look forward in our service to our customers, our communities and the state we call home. In addition, the new name reflects our service to the south central Indiana market and the products we offer the people who live and work in our communities.

There is much our founders wouldn't recognize about Indiana Band and Trust Company today, but 100 years later, our commitment to our customers and community is as strong as ever.
